Providing comfort, support, and hope for cancer patients and their families

Winter 2004

NEELY BONE MARROW COLLECTION CENTER AND LABORATORY NEARLY COMPLETE

As we close the year, construction is nearly complete on the Neely Bone Marrow Collection Center and Laboratory located in the South Building of Tufts-New England Medical Center (T-NEMC). This completely renovated, 6000-square foot space has been designed to provide necessary bone marrow collection services to outpatients in a warm and comfortable setting.

Elisa Tocco-Leonard, left, shown in the new Neely Bone Marrow Collection Center where the stem cells are processed. This workplace for the lab technicians has been redesigned and enhanced with state-of-the-art and more environmentally friendly equipment.

The discovery of immunosuppression that allows bone marrow transplantation was discovered at Tufts-New England Medical Center by Robert Schwartz, M.D., former Chief of the Division of Hematology/Oncology. The process of collecting donor stem cells to give to another person or to oneself has been performed in various locations throughout T-NEMC over the years. Cancer and leukemia patients or related or unrelated transplant donors often spend several hours in one sitting having their stem cells extracted in order for laboratory technicians to process them for infusion back into the patient. In keeping with our Foundation's mission of providing comfort to cancer patients and their families, improving the physical environment for these patients or their donors was a priority as bone marrow transplantation affects so many patients seen at T-NEMC's Cancer Center.

The newly renovated space, on the eighth floor of the South Building, features large windows on the north, south and east sides of the building along with wood floors, warm furnishings and comfortable lounge chairs. The entire layout of the top floor of this key T-NEMC building is designed to improve the patients' experience as they spend the time needed to prepare for their bone marrow transplant. The Center is located one floor above The Neely Center for Clinical Cancer Research that opened in 2002 as a resource to cancer patients and their families as they research and gain access to forward treatments for their disease.

"A facility with the capabilities of The Neely Bone Marrow Collection Center will dramatically improve the quality of the life for a patient preparing for complex treatments such as stem cell transplantation" said John K. Erban, M.D., Chief, Division of Hematology/Oncology at Tufts-New England Medical Center. "By supporting T-NEMC with over $2 million to complete this advanced center, The Cam Neely Foundation for Cancer Care has again provided the medical center and the City of Boston with a unique resource designed to help cancer patients deal much more effectively and comfortably with their illnesses. We are deeply indebted to their vision and determination to see this and other projects succeed," says Erban.

NEELY PEDIATRIC BONE MARROW TRANSPLANT UNIT IN DEVELOPMENT

As a way of continuing our commitment to improving the lives of cancer patients and their families, we are developing a new, improved area of The Floating Hospital for Children where they can stay during their bone marrow transplantation therapy.

Dear Friends,

We at The Cam Neely Foundation for Cancer Care are concluding our most successful year in our nine year history. Having raised over $2.6 million in 2003, we will use these critical funds to continue to help propel the Foundation's mission of providing comfort, support and hope to cancer patients and their families.

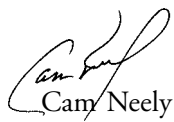

Immediate and positive impact continues to be felt through our two programs, The Neely House and The Neely Cancer Fund. The Neely House has been a home now to over two thousand families while The Neely Cancer Fund's Clinical Cancer Research Center functions daily to speed access to new clinical trials for cancer patients. Just this summer, the Foundation successfully raised necessary funds for the construction of the state-of-the-art Bone Marrow Collection Center and Laboratory at Tufts-New England Medical Center that is scheduled to open March 2004 (see cover story). And our campaign to raise $2 million to renovate the pediatric bone marrow transplantation unit at The Floating Hospital for Children is underway.

These initiatives, and more in the future, will continue to reflect our mission. The programs we create will be tangible and bring support to cancer patients and their families every day. Your on going generosity enables us to do our best work and we thank you for your belief in us and what we are working to achieve.

The memory of our mother and father and all who are unfortunately touched by this devastating disease continues to inspire and motivate us. Those we meet each day at The Neely House epitomize the strength, courage and love we can all share with each other.

Thanks again for your support. We wish you good health and happiness this year.

Sincerely,

Cam Neely
President

Scott Neely
Executive Director

The Neely Pediatric Bone Marrow Transplant Unit, location within The Floating Hospital for Children's Cancer Center, will be a spacious but private wing for pediatric patients and their families. Often, parents do not have a comfortable environment for living and sleeping near their child during their transplant and with this new unit, families can stay together through this long and sometimes lonely process.

The Floating Hospital's Cancer Center sees thousands of children with cancer each year, many of whom require a bone marrow transplant as their life-saving therapy. Tufts-New England Medical Center and its Floating Hospital for Children are renowned around the country for their expertise and outcomes. This process can be a long and isolating one — the child with cancer has their bone marrow harvested and then receives their own cleansed, healthy cells intravenously. The child then spends as many as six to eight weeks in a technologically-sophisticated clean room that uses specially-filtered air and rigorous sterilization to protect their immune system as they heal.

"The new Neely Pediatric Bone Marrow Transplant Unit will, of course, provide the state-of-the-art medical technology and facilities required to care for children looking for hope from these intense treatment programs," says Larry Wolfe, M.D., Chief, Division of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology at The Floating Hospital for Children. "Perhaps more importantly, the physical design of the unit will focus on not only medical care, but the entire experience of care for the patient and their family. The Neely unit will transform the story of bone marrow transplant for a child by providing the amenities that will enable families to view this unit full of technology and intense treatments as a temporary, unthreatening home of healing," explains Dr. Wolfe.

Key funds are currently being raised in order to begin construction by mid 2004.

Neely House Holiday Celebration

Friends, family, volunteers, caregivers and guests shared a special evening at The Neely House on December 19 to celebrate the holiday and all of its traditions. Each year, The Neely House serves as a home away from home for cancer patients and their families – and the holidays are a time for present and former guests to share holiday cheer and enjoy the comfort of the house. “It is wonderful that patients and families who have stayed at the House want to return to share holiday spirit with others they have met here,” says Cam Neely, president of The Cam Neely Foundation for Cancer Care. “The House provides so much more than we ever expected.”
